PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

TABER HIGH SCHOOL

TABER - ALBERTA

OFFICE OF THE PRINCIPAL

At a Zoo even the most casual of observers must notice the differences that exist among the animals. A more careful observer would notice the similarities and perhaps also the "human characteristics" of some of the animals. He would be wrong, of course. These "human characteristics" are really animal characteristics found in human beings. A human being is an animal — made of flesh and blood — he has legs, arms, body, eyes, ears and a nose. True, a human being stands erect on his hind legs (very unhealthy) has less body hair or fur than most animals, his sense of smell, sight and hearing is usually less keen than that of other animals, his claws are shorter and his teeth less sharp. Man's surface advantages seem to be that he is a large animal and has a thumb which opposes his fingers and enables him to grasp objects readily.

What sometimes seems to be a less easily recognized difference is man's ability to think rationally and logically. As far back as Aristotle's time and before, the ability to think has been recognized as a distinctive human characteristic — one that animals do not possess in even the most infinitesimal degree. It is this ability to think that has enabled man to shape his environment to suit himself rather than being forced to conform to his physical surroundings. Man has also brought about a social order which is in a constant state of flux. A mark of humanity is constant change, progress and development. A mark of other animals is a static order. A colony of bees three thousand years ago would be organized and react in the identical manner as does a colony of bees today.

Question: Since man thinks, why doesn't he progress more rapidly? Why is he still faced with a multitude of problems that faced his ancestors many hundreds of years ago? A general answer is that in each human a constant war is in progress between his animal nature and his human nature. His body cries aloud for sensual pleasures that some humans are too weak-willed to resist. In short their animal nature triumphs over their human nature. And each time this happens in an individual human it affects. if even in only a small degree, the entire human race. Multiply the occurrance by the millions of humans in the world and by the number of times it occurs in each human daily, and you begin to get a faint idea of the answer to our question.

Instead of thinking logically a person tends to rationalize, or to put it more bluntly, he thinks with his stomach rather than his brains. Emotions, prejudices, bias and intuition become substitutes for clear thinking. An animal reacts in a situation according to its instincts, no rational thought is involved and, sadly enough, too many human beings react in the same manner. It is easier than thinking. Thinking is hard work, harder than physical labor, and drains the body of energy so human beings prefer to avoid such strenuous effort.

Our present world is one of giant strides forward in both material and moral areas .We have advanced more materially in the past fifty years than we have in the previous ten thousand. While individual morality has shown no remarkable improvement, collective morality, that is recognizing that we are our brother's keeper, has advanced very rapidly since the great economic depression of the thirties.We are living in a world of dizzying advances and mighty ideological conflicts. We have a long way to go. Thank God that we have men who recognize that the purpose of life is not to pursue pleasure but to assume responsibility as human beings or our race would perish. High school students have reached a time in their life when they must consider: to be a man or to submit to the indignity of letting our animal nature get the upper hand. Which will you choose? Think!

Hi-Lites

A good school is a priceless asset. It is one which is meeting the educational needs of its community as adequately as possible. It is characterized by a strong sense of teamwork among the administration, the teaching body, the non-teaching personnel ,the students and the public. An essential element of a good school is spirit or morale.

Chemistry students are such cowards. The other day I overheard one whimpering, "But Mr. Sennaka, I am not an aborigine, I have more brains than a turnip, and I do not think like a fence post!" A fact is a fact but as soon as I can convince him that I'll be back with more gossip in the next issue of this top-notch paper.

INITIATION

Dig those outfits!

"You're heavy, Cynthia!"

"Come on, let's go!"

"So, that's what those bicycle racks are for!"

The latest style.

"Don't be so mean".

"What happened?"

When I was young I used to think
The boys were sweet as pie,
But when I think of what I thunk
I think I thunk a lie!

"Gee, whiz!"

"Neat outfit, no?"

CLASS HISTORY

SANDRA VAN ORMAN

Mr. Chairman, respected teachers, honored guests and fellow graduands, it is my pleasure to give you the history of this great and illustrious class.

It's amazing what 12 relatively short years have done to develop us from small, cowering, timid little beginners to our present status as intellectual giants, who daily astound our teachers with our profound wisdom — why else do they shake their heads in bewilderment when we contribute our viewpoints? Let's take a look at what has happened during these 12 years to bring about such a metamorphosis.

Our physical environment has also changed considerably. For a few months in Grade one we went to school for half a day in a small white building beside the United Church. Grade 2 and the completion of Grade 1 were spent in the building which now houses the Workshop. The next year we went to school in the clump of buildings to the west of the Central School; next we went to the Central School, and finally in Grade 9 to the high school. Bordering next door to the high school, we can see what future students will soon be enjoying.

From the instructions and teachings received during the elementary grades we built a good background in the "three R's", language techniques and the natural sciences.

Junior high ushered in a new phase in which we commenced experimenting with responsibility and independence. Who can forget the fun of class competition in drama and sports? Social activities such as dancing and dating were an important addition to the curriculum.

Grade 9 intrdouced us to new experiences such as a hectic initiation day and the worries and strains of departmental exams.

Then we entered high school, the last phase of our general education. At this time we had to decide what fields of endeavor to choose and what courses to take.

In Grade 10, our numbers were augmented by the Barnwell and Cranford students, but we lost many of our old friends when the St. Mary's School was opened. Along the way we lost others who took some of the many by-roads along the highway of education. The rest of us stumbled on and now we are celebrating what we have been striving for ever since we started school — Graduation!

Talent? Why yes, of course, we have talent. The President of the Student's Union and many of the leaders of the various clubs come from this great graduating group. Besides leadership, some in our class have gained recognition for their achievements in music, citizenship, athletics, and academic subjects.

As we look back, hundreds of memories come crowding into our minds of things accomplished and knowledge gained for which we are grateful to our teachers, parents and fellow students. But mostly we are looking forward and planning for a bright future.

In another month we will have to say good bye to T.H.S. and most of the things we have known and taken for granted all our lives. We will always have a special place in our hearts for these past memories of school and social affairs.

EDITORIAL

I'd like to thank my co-operative staff and advisors for the wonderful assistance I've received during this past year. It's really been a pleasure and rewarding experience to be editor of "Dawn 1960" and I sure hope all of you enjoy it.

I wish the best of luck to everyone in his chosen field, and to sum up, I think the most appropriate poem is one written by a T.H.S. graduate.

Yours truly,

Maggie Megyes

Students in Action

WHAT LIES AHEAD?

The road's been long and rugged,
The jolts have not been few,
And many times we've gotten stuck
But still we've made it through.
The ruts were deep, the grade was steep.
Our travel has been slow.
The crossroads were so numerous
We knew not by which to go.
But at last we've made the highway,
The dirt roads are behind.
And as others go on by us
These thoughts flash through our minds:
Will we have the strength and stamina
To keep up with the pace?
Or will we be a straggler?
In this grueling human race?
It would be a great deal easier
To stick to the wagon trail
Than to venture out on the highway
Where speed and power prevail.
But if we have built our engines
With only the best of parts
Then although we may be frightened
We'll know within our hearts
That we'll somehow reach our object
Although it be far away,
While the others whose makings are paltry
Will drop out along the way .

JIM HILL

Mr. McNeil, Guest speaker

VALEDICTORIAN

Walter Shworan

It is my duty to give the farewell address. I hope that what I say is in your own hearts and will linger with you always.

Somewhat prognostically you may imagine that I will attempt to give you some advice at this opportune moment, which is for most of you, the pinnacle of your education. You could be right. Reflect for a moment upon your past twelve years of tedious but needy schooling and ask yourself this one question, "What is the greatest skill, concept, or idea that I have been taught or I have learned?" It is a difficult question, I know, and it takes careful investigation for the correct reply. Well, in what field did this endeavor lie? Chemistry? Mathematics? English? or Social Studies? If you also delve more pensively into your subconscious you will perceive that it has been the ability to reason clearly, almost instinctively, and to think liberally, freely. Yes, to think. This mental gift, talent or ability is your greatest achievement. It is and will be the greatest solver of the world's problems —your problems. Therefore, the next time that you are floored by the query, "And what are you going to do about it?" you can THINK of the proper rebuttal.

Now, graduates, gaze at one another, into your classmates eyes, and wordlessly congratulate one another for each other's good fortune and worthy company. You have accomplished a remarkable feat, one which one or two years ago you had believed to be almost unattainable — you are graduating! But then look with a more jealous eye at the more, as some say,intelligent person and whistfully remark, "Why was I so darn lazy? Bah, I could have achieved twice as much if I had only half tried!" Nonetheless, we still got here. We did it!

Hold on there! Don't be so vainglorious. Your teachers too deserve some miserly fraction of the credit for your noteworthy accomplishment. It is with smug satisfaction that they look upon you and ponder, "Yes, he sure was some student but lucky for him, he was also My student." Thus to those efficient experts of enlightenment we gratefully say, "Thank you. It has been a pleasure doing business with you." And as it happens every year, some sentimental ignoramus, on June 30, shall say with true misty eyes, and dejected and tremulous voice, "I'm really going to miss you."

To Taber High School, our stately Alma Mater, goes an avalanche of thanks and a bid of adieu. Your narrow halls and sweet musty rooms shan't ever be forgotten.

Lastly, humble thanks are to shower our parents. Without the support of their firm hand and generous resources our success would not have been possible in the slightest degree. "Rejoice, Mom and Dad! I'm finally graduating!" is a heartfelt cry which is often met by a sigh of relief by every loyal parent. Yet, with it go the pathetic words of the parent, "Maybe he can now survive and live off the rest of this greedy world." or "Maybe she can now find some sucker to support her." No, their thoughts are not quite that lowly. This poem by Virginia Brasier best express their emotion at this time.

THE CROSSING

It takes strong kindness and it takes kind strength
And painful self-restraint to let the young
Go out beyond our fenced protective length.
It takes a firm-lipped grasp upon the tongue.
Whatever is a sterner trial than this,
To let our best-loved cross the strange abyss
On bridges we have built? (For men are frail
And fallible — and what if they should fail?)

Yet how was the bridge built on which they walk?
A thousand little times of tender talk.
A thousand watchful nights when prayers were said
And kisses dropped upon a sleepy head.
A weave of backyard-play and picnic-days
Of hurts and fights and punishment and praise,
Of honesty for honesty's bright sake
And trust to own to an adult mistake.
And good hot food and cold milk shared, and chores
Arithmetic and mounds of apple cores.

The bridge is good! The bridge was strongly woven.
What was it built for? If not to be proven!
We fear their very lack of fear and then
They leave as children and come back to us as men.

Therefore, Mom and Dad, your unfaltering love and encouragement may not have been justly deserved but do not be disappointed with us, ever! Soon we shall not only find, but we will build you that pot of gold at the end of the many-hued rainbow. Parting is such sweet sorrow . . .

And seniors, strive for university and other great halls of learning. To you students who will fail to continue on with further formal education I have this comforting statement to make: At life's end, God will not look you over for medals, degrees, or diplomas, but for SCARS!"

Hail and farewell seniors,
May we someday meet again.

CLASS

PROPHECY

Guy Passey

It is the year 2000 A.D. and as I browze through the Public Archives of Alberta I am astounded at what I find. My whole class of 1960 made headline news. Here are some of the headlines I read:

In 1970 Siegfried Jabs received therapy for schizophrenia. He began to have delusions that he was . . . Mr. Semaka. Horrors class.

Gerry Easthope was lost to the civilized world in 1969, when, while on safari in the jungle of Africa, he was carried off by a female orangutang. She literally captivated him.

In 1986 Beth Dynes and Phyllis Tanner embarked on an exploration into deepest Amazon. Here they discovered a new tribe of South American cannibals. Theirs was a short but illustrious career.

Diane Furukawa became a chiropractor in 1977.

Walter Shworan had graduated from University with a degree in foreign languages and had gone on to make his first million revising the Lower Slobovian dictionary.

Sandra Van Orman became a lady wrestler and won titles in three countries by using the technique of talking her opponents into submission.

Robert Hamshaw and Brian Dennis teamed up in the recording industry and made good singing commercials for Ipana Toothpaste.

Nick Zadan became the greatest miler in history. His record of 3 min. 10.53 sec. stood until it was discovered that his irate wife had been chasing him with a rolling pin.

In 1968 Amy and Marie Teshima developed a new type of potato chips. It was colored like the rainbow and guaranteed to give technicolor dreams.

Carol Akers set a flagpole sitting record of 82 hours. However, this was not too remarkable considering the fact that the pole was laying down at the time.

Gary MacDonald became a rodeo star when he found out that a little glue in the right places works as good as practice any old time.

Ann Konno became the nation's number one recording sensation when she sang nursery rhymes with a rock and roll beat.

Lowell Francis invested his savings in a lot on Mars but lost his shirt when it was discovered that he had purchased a Martian garbage dump.

John Forster became the commander of an atomic submarine and became the first man to become lost under the polar ice cap. He had an excuse though. He said it was dark under there.

Mary Zacharias graduated from the Royal Conservatory of Music and went on to play lead guitar for Rickey Nelson.

Art Olson got a job as an actor on CBC - TV and was presented with the Liberty award for his performance as Tarzan on a children's hour.

Maggie Megyes went to auctioneering school and became world renowned for her ability to sell bobb-pins for 50 cents apiece.

Garry Smith became head Cherry Sticker at a New York cocktail lounge.

Steve Pallay and Pete Mienansverdriet went into business as popcorn vendors in Central Park. They had a sideline, however, pidgeon pie.

Helen Slavik finally made University after several futile attempts when the capsule in which she was riding re-entered the earth and landed on the campus. A very determined girl that one.

John Konno joined the Chicago Black Hawks in 1962 and led his team for three years in stick taping.

Julie Machida proved to all her prowess as a saleswoman in 1966 by selling 2,000 electric can openers to the aborigines of Australia.

Johnny Miyanaga became a fire chief in 1972 and revolutionized this public service by repainting all his trucks baby blue with passionate pink polka dots.

Mae Shigehiro was hired as treasurer for the Teamsters' Union and wrote a best seller called "Tax Evasion in 10 Easy Lessons".

Fern Pederson became a teacher and in 1984 put Mr. Semaka's favorite hope into practice: teaching through hypnosis.

Henry Derkson went to work for General Motors where he designed a car that had no need for gas or oil. He was destined to make a million. Unfortunately the car wouldn't run.

Tim Haynes joined the Space Rangers in 1980 and went to live as a hermit on a far distant asteroid.

Toshiye Ito married six different times before she finally settled down with her true love to live quietly off her alimony.

Roy Krahn moved to England where he worked as a town crier.

Sharon Hutchinson became a concert pianist and won audience with the Queen by playing chopsticks while standing on her head.

Kala Erikson and Linda Fallon crossed golden rod with roses and came up with . . . you guessed it: hay fever.

Judy Hall astounded the world by being the first woman to break the sound barrier — riding a horse.

And as for me; well I guess I'd better get my broom and get back to sweeping the floor, lunch hour is almost over.

CURLING CLUB

EXECUTIVE: Mr. Ainscough, advisor; Brian Dennis, vice-president; Robert Hamshaw, president; Carol Akers, secretary; Diane Furukawa, treasurer.

We have had a very successful year in the curling club this year, and I believe that everyone enjoyed it.

Our rinks have competed in various bonspiels throughout Southern Alberta, and our Brier Rink competed in Lethbridge. In our own bonspiel, the Rick Meindinger rink from Lethbridge, took first place in the first event.

I would like to thank everyone who worked so hard to help make this past year of curling so successful. A special thanks goes out to our counsellor, Mr. Ainscough, without him, none of it would have been possible.

In our private competitions each week, the rinks placed in this order:

Omatani	Akers
D. Dennis	Shimbashi
Hamshaw	B. Dennis
Venard	Kerkhoff
Malinsky

Upon looking back upon the past year's sporting scene of the high school; I think that the students can be proud of the teams that represented their school. I wonder, though, if the students can be proud of the support which they gave their teams.

Basketball was the first major sport of the year. It wasn't long after the practices started that the two squads were trimmed down to twelve fighting tigers. Admittedly, at times they looked as if they had left their teeth at home. Keith Karren is still looking for his.

The Globetrotters ran roughshod over their league without suffering a defeat in league or play-off games. They are the only team that I know of that can give a coach ulcers along with an increased vocabulary without losing a game. We also won our share of tournaments as well as all-star and MVP awards. It was not until the South Alberta play-offs that we met our Waterloo. The St. Mary's Warriors scalped us twice before knocking us out of the tournament. Kent's hair hasn't grown back yet.

The Dawns, under the capable coaching of Mr. Anderson, fought like the wildcats they are and came up with their share of wins. Many of their losses were of the close variety. The Dawns just missed the play-offs by two points. Just wait until next year.

It might be said here that a necessary part of any successful team, basketball or otherwise, is it's bench strength. Without a good bench, a team is dead. Some of the players didn't play as much as they would have liked but they never missed a practice and their enthusiasm was high. These play ers are our unsung heroes.

Our track and field team was comprised of a few hardy individuals who would rather run and jump in the morning instead of sleeping. Work outs were held every morning at 7:00 am for a handful of old faithfuls. Bill Conrad, Ralph Jorstad, Gayle Jensen, Guy Passey, Mick Zadan would warm up by chasing Diane Towle around the gym. Grant Smith thought that it looked like so much fun that he started coming out too.

On June 4th, our thin-clad stars prepared to strut their stuff at Grassy Lake. It was so cold in the morning that John Konno couldn't pull his warm-up suit on over his goose pimples. Carolyn Malinsky lost her jeans for awhile and her knees were knocking together so hard her teeth would have fallen out if they hadn't been glued in. I think she is still knock-kneed.

However, we did manage to capture the lion's share of the honors. In the boys' class of 14 - 15 years, Lew Neilson won the javelin with a throw of 94 ft. 6 in., as well as the 100 yard dash in 11.5 seconds. Our boys also won the 880 yd. relay with the team comprised of Lew Neilsen, Jerry Anderson Ron Conrad and Blaine Burbank. Their record time was 1 min. 24.7 sec.

In the boys 16 - 17 class Bill Conrad took first place honors in the javelin with a throw of 115 ft. 9 in., as well as the high jump, jumping 4 ft 10¼ in. Bill also won the 440 open in a time of 1:28 Joe Gibbons and Gayle Jensen placed second and third respectively.

Ted Nishima, a transfer student from Coaldale, went all out and captured the aggregate in his class as well as tying for the boy's grand aggregate. Ted won the hop-step and broad jump with jumps of 34 ft. 6 in. and 17 ft. 10 in respectively. He broke the existing records in winning the 100 yd dash and the 220 in the record time of 10.5 sec. and 24.4 sec. respectively. Taber also won the 880 relay with the team composed of Ted Nishima, Gayle Jensen, Bill Conrad and Grant Smith.

We also had more than our share of winners in the boys 18 and over class. Kent Stevens muscled his way to the top in the discus and shot put with throws of 104 ft 3 in. and 37 ft. ¾ in. respectively. Guy Passey won the javelin with a throw of an even 90 ft. John Konno was outstanding in setting two records. John hop-stepped 40 ft. 8 in. and ran the 220 yd. dash in 22.1 sec. for his records. He also won the 100 yd. dash in 10.4 sec., as well as the mile. Nick Zadan placed second in the mile.

The Taber boys won over half, 18 out of 31, of their events. This is a record to be proud of.

The girls were not quite so successful although it was not for the lack of trying. Carolyn was the only one to win a first as she threw the javelin 59 ft. 6 in. in the 14 - 15 class. Taber did win the 16 - 17 440 relay in a time of 1 min. 6 sec. The members of the team were Shala Neilson, Beverly Newman, Diana Towle and Carolyn Malinsky. Other girls who participated were Rosalyn McPhee, Donna Goruk and Shirley Lowry. While these girls did not come up with too many firsts, they won a flock of second and third prize ribbons.

Those who participated in the track meet can be proud of their accomplishments.
